

Teeko's 'MySoundstation' now out!

Written by Administrator
Sunday, 15 October 2006
Last Updated Sunday, 15 October 2006

As we announced a little while back, Teeko's debut album 'My Soundstation' is now out, after a little delay. Postponed from an original September release, the debut album from the 4OneFunk and Dollar Bin Quintet member, and all round dope producer, is finally available on the 4OneFunk label - on CD and double vinyl.

The album features The Dollar Bin Quintet (Mike Boo, Teeko, Max Kane, BCause & J-1), Jazz saxophonist Kenny Brooks and drummer Jay Lane (Ratdog & Alphabet Soup). And based on the tracks we've heard so far (some of which you can check on recent Turntable Radio podcasts) we can guarantee you this is one album you don't want to be missing.

You can purchase the album at MusicESP.com, while retailers and anyone interested in getting copies into their shops (or customers wanting their shops to stock the LP) should hit up TRC Distribution. You can hear extracts from the album over at 4onefunk.com (which should be getting a revamp shortly) and myspace.

The likes of Jazzy Jeff, Ricci Rucker, Qbert and Billy Jam have all justly heaped praises on this release which truly showcases a new era of Bay Area music - so now all you've got to do is get your hands on it and discover what all the fuss is about. Trust us you won't be dissapointed. Oh and look out for an upcoming interview with the man himself on this site very soon talking about the album, past, present and future.